

The House On Maple Street

It was a perfect lift off. A couple named Emily and Jake were in the house on Maple Street. They were excited that they purchased the house and moved in. They were a young couple, in there thirties. Jake was a person who has brown hair and brown eyes. He looked like he was in all brown and he was wearing dark clothing. Emily was also having dark brown hair and brown eyes. She was wearing a blue shirt and dark blue pants. Emily looked a lot like on the bright side. A black round, older car was parked beside the house. A big, blue mailbox was right across the house. Beside the house, there was a small pine tree. Inside the house, Emily was sitting on the couch reading a newspaper. Jake was watching Jeopardy on TV. It was a dark and rainy evening and suddenly, the house began to rumble. Jake glanced over to the window and said, "It looks like it is so dark outside".

"It is raining so hard that there will be thunder", said Emily sitting on the couch. "This house smells like overcooked food, rotten vegetables, and dirty floors that had not been clean". All of a sudden the house burst up like a rocket in the sky. It was a perfect lift off. Jake stood up and turned off the TV and put down the remote. Emily put down the newspaper on the table.

"I feel like there is an earthquake," said Jake.

"Just sit down, Jake," replied Emily "This will be a long flight".
